

3rd Annual Operation YES to College workshop – for 8th to 12th graders and their families –
FREE FUN & INFORMATIONAL PROGRAM

This program is meant for families with children from 8th to 12th grade. All the family members are welcome

This is the third annual Operation YES to College workshop and we have faced great success in the past! Operation YES is a preparatory workshop that invites children and young teens with diabetes, along with their families, to come learn about options and opportunities for pursuing college.

Hear from college students with diabetes and learn how they handle transitioning to college life. Additionally, get the inside scoop from admissions officers from universities such as Stanford and USC.

Other topics will include how to pursue collegiate sports while managing diabetes, filling out college applications, acing the SAT and even how to graduate debt-free.

Most importantly, join together in a fun event to see other motivated students taking an active step towards higher education and their highest potential! After all, it only takes a little extra effort to be extraordinary!

For all of you who are planning on coming to this year's Operation YES, we have quite the line up!

Julia Jackson is back and she will be relaying her fantastic experiences studying abroad and managing diabetes.

Frank Sanders will wow us again with his stories of getting his pilot's license and remaining so very focused in college.

Bonnie and Annie Yan will give us some great insight into applying for financial aid and scholarships.

I (Darshana Prakasam) will open up the workshop and speak about what we all know and love - the SAT - and how to succeed with it.

Annnd even more speakers and more information from various colleges and universities and how to pursue your biggest goals and dreams without diabetes holding you back!

And though we promise that it will be a blast regardless, look forward to some exciting prizes at the raffle. No purchase necessary!
